

Volunteers flush at TCA

July 31, 2007

More than 40 volunteers came to the Tempe Center for the Arts on July 31 to help test the flushing capacities of the new building.

After an introduction, the group went to designated restrooms and on the count of “three” all flushed a toilet.

Construction personnel determined that more water pressure was needed, so the group returned to their stations and flushed again. The second test was a success.
